Round 1: Mehfil e Sukhan

How well do you really know Urdu?

Mehfil-e-Sukhan is where words, language, literature, and everything in between come together. Some things may seem familiar, while others might make you pause and rethink what you thought you knew.

Expect the unexpected. A sharp memory might help, but curiosity, instinct, and a good command of the language may take you further.

There is no particular path to prepare for this round, just come with your knowledge of Urdu and an open mind.

The rest is for you to discover.

Duration: 1-1.5 hours

Delegate cap: 3 maximum

Round 2: Bait Baazi

A game of words, memory, wit, and perhaps a little improvisation.

Bait Baazi will take you into the world of Urdu poetry, where one verse becomes the beginning of another and the smallest detail can determine what comes next. The teams emerging with the highest scores from Round 1 will enter this stage, where they will compete directly against one another in a battle of poetic recall and creativity.

Teams will build upon the verses presented before them, navigating the constraints of the round while attempting to keep their poetic repertoire, and their creativity alive. Delegates may draw upon existing poetry or compose their own verses, provided that their contributions remain within the boundaries of the competition and maintain an appropriate standard of language and content.

As an elimination round, the stakes rise with every turn. Delegates will be assessed on their ability to sustain the poetic chain, the number and range of verses they can produce, their creativity, and their ability to respond spontaneously to what has just been presented.

With every verse, the circle narrows

Duration: 2 hours

Delegate cap: 4 maximum

Round 3: Manzar Nama

Every scene has a story. Every story has a voice. But what happens when the scene is left for you to interpret?

Manzar Nama will place the remaining teams before a moment, a setting, or perhaps something far less straightforward. What follows will depend entirely on how they choose to see it.

The challenge lies not simply in finding the right words, but in finding words that belong together; words that can give meaning to what has been left unsaid.

Some may see a picture. Others may see a story waiting to unfold.

The final interpretation is yours.

Duration: 1.5-2 hours
